Will D. Thornton Wins District And Region Driver Test

Murray High School was regional winner last Friday in the "Tomorrow's Travelers" contest being sponsored by the State Police, a state paper, and the Department of Public Education.

The purpose of the contest is to bring out safe driving among high school students.

Murray High won in the district and regional tournaments, based on the basketball districts and regions, and is now eligible for the contest at the state fair.

Sixteen regions will participate in the contest there, and the winner will receive a new automobile.

Will D. Thornton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thornton, was the district and regional winner for Murray High.

Two thousand entered the contest.

Letter To Editor

201 Commerce Building
304 West Liberty Street
Louisville 2, Kentucky

Dear Editor:

As always I enjoyed my visit to Murray and it was a pleasure sitting down with you again for the purpose of discussing our Savings Bonds Program.

Upon returning to the office this morning I found that we have received the sales figures from the Federal Reserve Bank. This report indicated that there had been $15,806.00 in Savings Bonds reported from Calloway county giving a two month's total of $48,743.00, which is a long step toward your goal of $225,000.00.

Looking forward to my next visit to Murray, I remain, with best personal regards,

Cordially,
Raymond J. Augustus
Deputy Director for Ky.

Two Sides Of The Square To Be Used In Mule Day Program

Two sides of the court square will be roped off on Mule Day Monday March 23, for the full day of festivities which are expected to draw a crowd of ten thousand to Murray.

Murray, the rapidly growing hub of a growing trade center, will receive the many people from the surrounding area on that day to honor the backbone of agriculture in the earlier history of the county, the mule.

It's true that the lowly mule received a setback when the modern tractor invaded the quiet farm lands of the county, but he can not be counted completely out.

The mule still has a place in our economy and a $20.00 pair of good handmade bridles awaits the best team to show in Murray on that day. The Brausa Harness Shop contributes the bridles for the first prize in that class, and they were made by Mr. Brausa himself, acknowledged as the best harness and saddle craftsman within a hundred mile area of Murray.

Other prizes include a $10.00 pair of workshoes by the Family Shoe Store; $10.00 in merchandise by the Calloway County Soil Improvement Association; a $29.95 solid brass lamp by the Larry Kerley Company; 25 baby chicks by the Murray Hatchery; $10.00 in merchandise from the W. D. Shoemaker Seed Co.; three bags of fertilizer from the Ellis Popcorn Co.; three weeks pass to the Variety or Capitol; 100 pounds of Vitality dog food from the Thurmond Mill; and many other prizes for the various categories in the mule, horse and dog contests. Twenty-five prizes in all will be given.

One side of the square will be filled with displays of tractor and implement dealers and the new model cars from the various dealers in Murray will also be seen.

The other roped off area will be used for the judging of the animals.

A stand will be erected on the corner of the square from which Galen Gough, renowned strong man of Benton will give a demonstration. Mr. Gough will also show some of his paintings which are reputed to be bringing from $1,000 to $1,500 dollars.

If Governor Wetherby is able to attend the days festivities, as he expects to be able to do, he will also use the stand to make a short talk.

Murray merchants will have specials for that day, to make the town even more of a trading center than it now is.

Numerous people have already expressed their intention to come in to Murray on Mule Day and to show their animals.

The merchants have cooperated to a fine point by giving prizes that will be worth any trouble that might be met in bringing animals to Murray to show.

Knife and dog swapping is expected to reach a climax in the early forenoon as the judging begins.

Another feature of the day will be an auction by the Murray Rescue Squad. The proceeds from the auction will be used by the squad for the purchase of equipment to be used in rescue and emergency work. The programs is being sponsored jointly by the daily LEDGER AND TIMES and the Murray Rescue Squad.

The purpose of the day's program is to establish a trade day for Murray and to bring out the worth of the Murray Rescue Squad to the public which it serves.

The squad receives no remuneration for its work, and all its members are volunteers who desire to render a greater service to their fellow men in need.

Trucks Hit By Fighters

By WENDELL MERICK
SEOUL, Korea, Mar. 16 (UP)—American and Australian fighter-bombers turned a rugged mountain road into a flaming death trap for Communist supply trucks today in the biggest single blow against Red vehicles in months.

Red trucks were jammed bumper-to-bumper along a five-mile stretch of road on the east coast as Meteors, Thunderjets, and Marine Panther jets swooped down on the convoy with bombs and bullets.

The Allied warplanes destroyed two-thirds of the 150 trucks in the convoy.

At the same time, other Thunderjets and Pantherjets attacking center afield while U. S. Sabrejets flying protective cover knocked down one Communist MIG-15.

Australian Meteors opened the assault on the Red convoy on a steep mountain road leading down onto the plain surrounding the east coast port of Wonsan.

Then came other Meteors, Thunderjets and Pantherjets. Attacking at dangerously low altitudes in the mountainous terrain, the UN warplanes nailed the convoy unmercifully. Some trucks tried to escape, but they could not pass or turn around.

Returning pilots said they left burning wreckage strewn over five miles of road. Smoke clouds hung over the area for hours. Preliminary estimates said more than 90 trucks were destroyed and many damaged.

Twisted steel is all that remains of the 1951 Buick pictured above, in which Opal Housden met his violent death Saturday night about 6:00 o'clock.

Opal Housden Is Killed In Car-Truck Crash Saturday

A two car-truck crash Saturday night claimed the life of Opal Housden of Murray Route 1 and brought severe injuries to Earl Lockhart and Robert Carson, both of Murray. Earl Akers, driver of the truck was not injured.

Lockhart with passenger Robert Carson were driving a 1951 Mercury, and Housden was driving a 1951 Buick. He was alone.

Earl Akers was driving a 1953 GMC tractor, pulling a large trailer load of shelled corn.

The accident happened about 6:00 p.m. Saturday night and the highway was wet with the rains that have fallen in this area for the past week.

Akers reported to State Police Corporal Brigham Futrell the following story of how the accident occurred.

He said that as he was pulling up the small hill just North of the airport site, three miles South of Murray, he saw the Mercury approaching him. Just as he saw the Mercury, he said, the Buick attempted to pass the oncoming car from behind.

As the Buick attempted to get back into the line of traffic, he became tangled with the Mercury, he said, and both cars went out of control.

The Buick came toward him for a head-on collision, he said, and the Mercury careened past him, finally overturning about 200 feet down the highway and landing in a depression along side the highway.

The Buick was literally torn apart. The generator was lying in the road, the motor torn out, the air filter landed in a field across the highway and the left hand door opened out on the right side of the car.

Mr. Housden landed in the highway face down and was killed immediately. His body was so broken that he was identified only with difficulty.

Lockhart received back and internal injuries and Carson received a broken leg.

Their automobile was also completely demolished.

The impact of the Buick hitting the GMC tractor was so great that the front wheels of the tractor were knocked completely from under the vehicle and the motor was thrust upward. It is believed that the tractor is out of line from the terrific impact of the collision.

Shelled corn was knocked from the trailer onto the highway and presented somewhat of a hazard until passing cars pushed it into the side ditches. All glass in the Buick was shattered with no piece being larger than rock salt used to freeze ice cream.

A Max Churchill ambulance removed the dead and injured from the wreckage, while members of the Murray Rescue Squad and the Sheriff's office directed traffic.

A Parker Motors wrecker pulled the disabled tractor with its trailer about one-quarter mile down the highway to a service station to clear the highway, and later removed the twisted wreckage of the Buick and Mercury.

Mr. Akers, who was uninjured said yesterday that he had just finished paying for his tractor and had new tires put on it. A left rear tire of the tractor was cut deeply.

Cpl. Futrell said that he highly appreciated the aid that everyone rendered while the accident was being investigated. He said that everyone offered help and that order was quickly restored, thus holding down the danger of further accidents while the highway was partially blocked.

A heavy rain was falling, for most of the time the accident was being investigated, but Rescue Squad members and the Sheriff kept the traffic moving swiftly.

One slight accident did occur.

One of two inches of rain was reported Sunday along the Atlantic Coast from Washington into New England with lesser amounts inland. Weather bureaus reported.

Light snow fell across the northern portions of the Great Lakes with scattered light showers south into northern Indiana and Ohio. Most of the western two-thirds of the country had fair to partly cloudy skies Tuesday.

Governor To Attend Mule Day

Governor Lawrence Wetherby has expressed an indication that he will be in Murray for the Mule Day, March 23.

The Governor expects to be in Bowling Green, Kentucky on March 24 and said that the date in Murray would work in easily with his planned trip.

In a letter to James Johnson, George H. Kerler, administrative assistant of the Governor, has asked for more information concerning the program, and indicated that the Governor would be here.

The letter to Johnson follows:

Mr. James Johnson
Tax Commissioner
Calloway County
Kentucky

Dear Mr. Johnson:

This follows up our telephone conversation of March 12 relative to the Governor attending "Trade Day" at Murray, on March 23.

The Governor registered an interest in this event and requests that you promptly send him an outline of the program for the day. If he can be with you he would like to begin his participation in the event in the afternoon around 2:00 as you suggested. Also, advise us if the Governor will be called up on to make a speech of extended length.

Since he plans to be in Bowling Green the following day, the trip to Murray would fit nicely into his schedule if all circumstances are favorable. Let me hear from you promptly.

Sincerely Yours,
George H. Kerler
Administrative assistant

HE GOT EVEN

AKRON, O., Mar. (UP)—Donald Shamblen got irritated when he had to wait behind a stalled pickup truck. At the next traffic light he "got even" by ramming the truck.

Shamblen was knocked down by the truck driver, taken to police headquarters and booked for driving under the influence of alcohol and assault and battery.

The driver of the truck was an off duty policeman.

Miss Rowland To Go On Tour

Ruth Rowland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claud G. Rowland, Route 2, will tour with the Transylvania College choir when it begins its annual spring tour on March 17. It was announced today by Harvey Davis, director of the 44 voice group.

Partly cloudy skies will prevail west to the Rocky Mountains, forecasters said. Showers are likely to start Tuesday in western Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, then spread eastward into Kentucky and Tennessee before heading north into the mid-Mississippi Valley by Tuesday night.

Warmer temperatures were predicted for today and Tuesday over the eastern plains and the mid-Mississippi and Ohio River valleys. Skies were to clear along the northern Pacific Coast and the sun was expected to break through early morning fog and low clouds in southern California.

One to two inches of rain was reported Sunday along the Atlantic Coast from Washington into New England with lesser amounts inland. Weather bureaus reported.

Light snow fell across the northern portions of the Great Lakes with scattered light showers south into northern Indiana and Ohio. Most of the western two-thirds of the country had fair to partly cloudy skies Tuesday.

WHD DIDN'T SOMEBODY TELL HIM

CHICAGO, Mar. 16 (UP)—Pres. Grinnell felt sympathetic toward the owner when he joined a crowd that watched a car sink into the Chicago River after rolling over a ledge.

Then, after a quick check, he realized it was his own automobile.

The Reluctant Cinderella

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE
AFTER DEREK had gone, Jason emerged from the kitchenette grinning. "You've certainly got me going. Just as well I made myself scarce. But it was a darned good old French farce, although in them the lover usually pops into a closet." His lean face sobered. "Carol, you're a sensible girl and concentrate on Derek... And now I'll leave you to get dressed."
She thrust the few dollars she had into his hand. "Take this, Jason. I won't need any money until I'm paid tomorrow." He hesitated. "All right, but it's a loan, darling."
"And don't forget if you do want a bed—"
She found she was suffering acutely from embarrassment and she hadn't felt embarrassed when they had discussed it before.
"No, darling," he said, "that's just one of those things I'm not going to do. You can resist temptation, but it's wisest not to stick your neck out. And—well, rather lovely. Did you know that, my sweet?"
He bent and kissed her forehead.
"Good luck, Jason," she whispered.
"Good luck to you, darling," he smiled, but this time there was a mockery in it; his hand squeezed her arm again and then he was gone. The room seemed empty afterwards and her feeling of extreme tiredness returned. It was an effort to start getting dressed up to go to the dance with Derek. As Derek drove Carol up before the breakers, she saw some couples dancing out on the patio. Light streamed through the glass windows of the veranda and mingling with the moonlight, vaguely, along with the dance music, she could hear the swish of the braisers beating against the sea wall in front of the hotel. A lovely setting, atmosphere, color, music...
As they walked across the grass, she told herself how lucky she was to be here with Derek. His white dinner jacket emphasized his dark good looks, and he had his hand under her elbow possessively. But somehow she couldn't keep her attention on him or what he was saying; she kept glancing about, instinctively looking for someone. She noticed the huge palms standing near the sea wall. It was by one of the palms that Jason was to meet Julie.
"Are you looking for anyone, Carol?"
"No," Julie told me she was coming tonight."
"Good. She's a nice kid."
She laid her short white apron jacket on a chair and they danced. The Tennessee Waltz, the same tune they danced to on the boat. She remembered the pleasure dancing with him had given her. Life that night had seemed full of thrilling and romantic possibilities. She tried to recapture the feeling, but somehow it eluded her. The and women dancing, the bursts of laughter, the chatter at the tables where guests sat drinking didn't help that cold sense of fear; the feeling that events were moving fast, faster than she dared think of to some climax, gave her a real sense of terror.

"What's the matter?" he said suddenly. "You're shivering," he said. "Shall we go inside?"
"No, I like it out here."
His hand moved down her bare arm slowly. "You are cold. We'll go inside after this dance."
They were sitting at one of the small tables inside the dance room when Derek said, "Thelma phoned while I was dressing tonight."
"Yes?"
"I told her I couldn't get back to New York. I said we were opening up a new shop. I thought it might be an excuse, and even if she didn't believe me, I thought it might show her," he hesitated. "How I felt."
He smiled bleakly. "No. Then I took your suggestion and said that if she wanted to see me for her to come down to Palm Beach."
"She's coming?"
"Yes, but not here. Apparently she knows of a small hotel in Vero Beach, Driftwood Inn. She's going there."
"When?"
"In a few days. I'll have to see her, but you know what I said last night, Carol?" He lowered his voice. "I'd be grateful if you'd come too."
She made a faint grimace. "She wouldn't like that."
"No, but," his hand reached for hers under the table, "I'll like it. I want her to know how I feel about you."
"Technically, she's still my boss," Carol murmured. "She could make things very unpleasant for me when I go back."
"But you're not going back. You know that, don't you, darling?" His hold on her hand tightened. "Vero Beach is not more than an hour and a half's drive. You'll come, Carol?" We've got to get this thing straightened out."
"But how can I go during the week?" she murmured. "I'll be working."
He smiled slightly again. "I'm your boss now, darling."
That darling again. Suddenly, in an unreasonable way, she hated him for saying it. He seemed to be taking it for granted she would marry him too. And it'd be a fool if it didn't, she told herself. Whoever heard of Cinderella turning down the Prince when he came with the glass slipper?
A group of latecomers were passing their table. Among them Carol noticed Julie clinging to her husband's arm. She was looking straight ahead and apparently she didn't see them. Carol thought she looked pale and her slight body tense.
She was beautifully gowned in her white lace. The emerald and diamond necklaces around her throat, the emerald and diamond

Wildlife Officers Arrests 2,533

FRANKFORT, Ky. — During 1952 a check of 115,886 fishing and hunting licenses in Kentucky resulted in 2,533 arrests, according to an announcement by Frank Phipps, director of Law Enforcement for the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

The increase number of convictions. Both arrests and convictions were at a new high.

In 1951, 124 arresting officers apprehended 2,369 violators with 1,918 convictions obtained. There were 147 enforcement officials on duty last year.

The increase number of convictions, Phipps said, seems to indicate that the courts have an increased respect for the department and that field men are obtaining more complete evidence when they make arrests. The ratio of convictions to arrests was 85.3 per cent.
